☞The Daily Journal has much the largest circulation in the city and double the circulation in the country of any other daily paper printed in Louisville; and the Weekly Journal has much more than double the circulation of all the other weekly papers in Louisville put together.

☞We have reason to be satisfied that the national American party is to-day stronger in a majority of the free States than either the Republican or the Democratic party, and in the South it is continually gaining ground. Already several of the leading Southern States are reckoned as certain for Fillmore, and in others there is a good prospect for the success of the American party. There are also indications that the Republican movement will be virtually abandoned as an independent organization in the Presidential contest. Those who took part with it at the outset have already begun to discover its weakness and its inability, as an independent party, to obtain a majority of the electoral votes. It has been ascertained to a certainty that they will not be able to carry all the Northern States, and there is no assurance that they can carry a single one. They have already greatly modified the position which they took in the commencement of this movement, and every day brings stronger evidence that they cannot be successful and that the contest will be exclusively between the American candidate and the nominee of the Cincinnati Convention.

The Old Line Whigs throughout the country are rallying to the standard of Fillmore. They love and respect him. They have confidence in him as a truly national man, and as one whose administration was far more beneficial to the country and shed more lustre upon the party by which he was elected than any other since the institution of our Government. They cannot, they will not endorse the platform enunciated by the Cincinnati Convention, avowing principles the antipodes of every Whig principle and Whig measure, a platform which seems without any provocation to fling defiance in the face of Old Line Whigism, and to flout at the doctrines which the Whigs have so long and earnestly advocated. They cannot and will not insult the ashes of the great leader of their party by supporting for the Presidency his most bitter and relentless political and personal enemy, the man who did more to injure him, and endeavored more sedulously to tarnish his fair fame than any other man in the Union. The Old Line Whigs cannot and will not oppose Millard Fillmore.

It is true that the Republicans have entertained a determined hostility to the American party for the simple reason that the American party alone has stood in the way of their success. Were the American party to retire from the contest altogether, the result would be the election of a Republican President. The greatest strength of the Democratic party is in the South, and, there being nothing whatever in its platform of principles to give it even the color of nationality, it would then become a sectional party and would be opposed by a Northern sectional party, and, as the North greatly preponderates in the electoral college, the result would be the election of a Northern sectional President. The American party has come into the field as a national organization, with a platform upon which conservative men in both sections can stand together, with a position upon the much vexed slavery question that is just and fair and safe for both the North and the South, and with principles independent of the slavery question and far more important to the country than it is. These principles give to it nationality. They are earnestly advocated by men in all sections.

The American party, thus constituted, has united in itself a large portion of the conservative men of the South and so many of the conservatives of the North as to preclude the possibility of the success of the Republican party and to render very improbable that of the Democratic party.

It is evident that, if the Republicans maintain their distinct organization, even if the election should be thrown into the House of Representatives, they will be in a minority, and either Mr. Fillmore or Mr. Buchanan will be elected. In view of this fact, step by step, the freesoil party have departed from their first ultra position and have become distracted and divided among themselves. They are already agitating the necessity for postponing for four years more their effort to establish their doctrine of "no more slave States" and are beginning to look about them to determine in which direction their strength shall be thrown. Notwithstanding the freesoil antecedents of Mr. Buchanan, they are distrustful of him with a platform which admits of either a Northern or a Southern interpretation. His instability in political affairs, the instability and utter faithlessness to party pledges, to principles, and platforms manifested by the party which he represents, and the uncertainty of the platform, upon which he comes before the country, afford no assurance as to what will be his position under circumstances which may arise hereafter. On the other hand Mr. Fillmore is presented to the country as the candidate of a conservative party, with a platform that is certain, plain, and cannot be misconstrued, and avowing a position in regard to the slavery question that is equally safe to both sections and unjust to neither. He stands forth the embodiment of conservatism throughout the Union, the representative of the national men of both the North and the South. He will not favor the cause of the Republicans, but with him they will have at least the assurance that no injustice will be done them, and, with him as the President and the conservative party, of which he is the candidate, in power, all will have a reasonable assurance of safety and adherence to the constitution, to the laws, and to the party pledges which have been given in the American platform. Under such circumstances it is the firm conviction of many close observers not only that the Republican party will, from necessity, postpone their success, but that the whole conservative and anti-Democratic sentiment of both North and South, except the small and insignificant portion of ultra, abolition fanatics under the lead of Garrit Smith et id omne genus, will be concentrated upon Mr. Fillmore.

The American party is thus the strongest and has attracted to it more of the elements of success than any of the political organizations which are now mentioned. It is everywhere daily gaining strength. Its opponents are already desperate. Their misrepresentations have been exposed. Their calumnies have been refuted. They are becoming despondent, helpless, and hopeless in spite of their blustering and vain boasting, and a united effort on the part of the conservative, anti-Democratic voters of the country will place Millard Fillmore in the Presidential chair and give peace to the country, security to the Union, and perpetuity to our American institutions.

AN AWFUL PANE.—The pen of the historian has not yet portrayed a very extraordinary scene that occurred at the Buchanan and Breckinridge ratification meeting in the court-house yard last Tuesday night. We must give the main facts as they have been stated to us by scores of spectators.

Probably there were fifteen hundred or two thousand persons in the meeting, a considerable number of them being seated upon the fence enclosing the yard. The second or third speaker was making a fiery speech, in which he dwelt most hostilfully upon the indomitable courage of the Democracy and declared that the Know-Nothings were too dead ever to know a resurrection. In the very midst of his furious declamation upon those topics, a board of the fence cracked from the weight of those sitting on it. Thereupon some one cried, "Here come the damned Know-Nothings," and instantly such a stampede ensued as was never seen in the city before. A dozen bombshells falling simultaneously into the crowd could not have caused a more sudden and utter dispersion of the unterrified Democracy. They rushed in all directions except that in which they fancied the invading army of Know-Nothings to be, and, falling over each other by hundreds, many of them couldn't take time to rise to their feet but scrambled along upon feet and hands as best they could. Loud and piteous appeals were made to the Know-Nothings not to shoot, and one Democrat clung to a tree, and, despairing of mercy at the hands of men, vociferously prayed to Heaven for protection. Not a solitary Democrat in all the crowd had the desperate courage to stand his ground. When at length some of the fugitives cast their eyes over their shoulders, they beheld a little circle or rather half circle of Know-Nothings around the speaker laughing immoderately at the ridiculous scene. A large number of hats were picked up by the boys and sold at auction at from twenty-five cents to a dollar apiece according to quality.

It is perfectly evident that the Democracy have no earthly chance in this city. A party so prone to panic can never do anything but run. The American party, with its characteristic conservatism, will of course be orderly on every election day, but some cowardly Democrat will be almost certain to raise the cry "there come the damned Know-Nothings," and then of course there will be such a stampede of the terrified "Unterrified" as occurred at the court-house on Tuesday night. All this comes of the awful exaggerations of the Locofoco organs in regard to the acts of the terrible Nothings on the 6th of August. The organs, by overdoing the thing, have defeated their own purposes—they have created in the souls of their political friends such a horrible dread of the terrific Nothings as no future efforts of theirs can allay. We shall certainly be warmly in favor of giving to the "Unterrified" upon election days and all other occasions every just and reasonable guaranty of protection in the exercise of their rights, but we are truly afraid that nothing can make them stand. Bad prospect to be sure.

[illegible]

The editor of the Democrat is surely in a desperate strait. He coolly misquotes us in order to charge us with inconsistency. What we said was this:

[illegible]

His misrepresentation of us is most contemptible.

Secrecy and proscription are the only objections that the opponents of the American party have ever dared to urge against it. For these, the Americans have been subjected to a flood of denunciation and calumny almost inconceivable, but the boldest of their opponents have never yet dared to attack the real principles of the party. These are invulnerable, and our enemies know it. They have not a word to say against any principle in the American platform. We challenge them to attempt to controvert a single one of them. Their only recourse is to coin from their own imagination a misrepresentation of these principles, to build up a phantom purely of their own creation, and upon it to make a most terrible onslaught.

In the infancy of the American party, secrecy was necessary for the protection of its members from the persecutions of their enemies, for the protection of their persons and property from the murderous violence and insane hatred of the foreign and Roman Catholic populations, aided and incited against them by reckless native demagogues. As soon as the necessity for secrecy ceased to exist, it has been dispensed with. The opponents of the American party are very much chagrined at this. It has deprived them of more than half their capital. It has impoverished them of objections to Know Nothingism. It is a convincing proof of the rapidly increasing strength of the new party. As this party takes off the mask of secrecy and stands out boldly and openly before the world, proud of its principles and full of confidence of success, its opponents are painfully constrained to acknowledge it as an honorable and formidable competitor. It courts investigation and inquiry, and confidently challenges a single argument against any of the principles enunciated in its platform. Its opponents dare not attack them. They are conscious of their inability to find fault with them. They seek to suppress their publication among the people and resort to denunciation and misrepresentation to prevent, if possible, their adoption by the people.

☞The editor of the Democrat says that Hon. Glancy Jones, of Pennsylvania, who represents Mr. Buchanan's district in Congress, declared upon the floor of that body a few days ago that Mr. Buchanan never saw the abolition resolutions adopted in Lancaster in November, 1819, until they were in print. Mr. Glancy Jones made this statement upon some authority which has never been produced. Like the editor of the Democrat, when he demanded proof in the place where the occurrence took place, he did not suppose that a file of the Lancaster Intelligencer of 1819 would be produced containing the proceedings of this very meeting and with the name of James Buchanan appended to these same abolition resolutions. Mr. Glancy Jones has not denied that Mr. Buchanan was one of the committee who reported these resolutions. They were published with his name affixed to them in 1819 in the newspaper in the town in which Mr. Buchanan lived. They have been repeatedly republished since. It has been charged upon him that he was the author of them and although he has had frequent opportunities to do so, he has never denied the truth of this charge. That he was one of the committee by whom the resolutions were reported is established beyond a doubt and that he has never denied the imputed authorship of them is sufficient evidence, in the absence of direct proof, that he was at least cognizant of and approved and endorsed their contents.

☞The Sat-Nothing organs in this city promised any quantity of "unmitigated speakers from this State" at the meeting on Tuesday night to ratify the Cincinnati nomination. These distinguished (!) speakers were Pugh, Hyde, and Gallagher, of Connecticut. There is a general inquiry as to who they are and for what they are making [illegible] to gather distinguished himself on that occasion by promulgating slanders upon the American party that he knew and his hearers knew had not a word of truth in them.

☞President Pierce has the right name, for he will indeed pierce the country well before he is done—pierce her through with many sorrows." And the editors under him are piercing fellows—particularly where the treasury vault's are to be pierced. It is a piercing business all round.

☞A perfect little gem of beauty.

[For the Louisville Journal.]

FORGET NOT MY LOVE.

Oh! forget not me love, when thou roamest afar,
With the silvery moon-light in thy cheerful blue eyes,
Let the thought of thy truth still shine on like a star,
Solemn, lonely and lovely in life's steamy skies.
Oh! forget not my love, oh! forget not my love.

When the sunset's deep glory is bright in the West,
When the twilight's low music lulls nature to rest,
With thy eye my lone spirit a sign or a tear
And when sweet flowers are blooming in valley and grove
Pass my heart with its sad—oh! forget not my love.

When the hot storm comes wailing across the dark wood,
And the night-bird's sad warning is heard from the hill,
When upon its rocks thrown in the heart's solitude,
Then forget not my love, for it will long for thee still—
Though we meet not again while we're fated to rove
Oh forget not my love, oh! forget not my love!

You, forget not my love, and I'll ask not again
To ask thy fond glances or hear thy low tone;
And I'll mourn thee in silence for words are too vain
For a lonely, sad spirit whose idol is gone!
But while wintry below and when rustling above,
Oh! forget not my love, oh! forget not my love!

S. M. H.

Nan Cassia, Ky.

MR. CLAY AND MR. BUCHANAN.—Col Preston said in his speech to the Cincinnati Convention that the great mass of the old Whigs would vote for Mr. Buchanan. The gallant Colonel has sometimes been mistaken, but we think never more mistaken than in this case. We can show the old Whigs, if they do not know the fact already, as we are very sure a great many of them do, that Mr. Buchanan is just about the last respectable man in the world for whom they could properly or consistently vote.

So far as Mr. Buchanan's conduct toward Henry Clay is concerned, his record is a most accursed one. As soon as we can lay our hands upon the document we want, we shall make this abundantly manifest. Henry Clay is dead, but he did not die without leaving in his own handwriting the most damning testimony against James Buchanan. In mercy he spared Mr. B. for nearly a quarter of a century, but, near the close of his illustrious life, he deemed an exposition of Mr. Buchanan's conduct in the Congressional election of President in 1825 due to his own fame with posterity—and he made it.

☞Mr. Buchanan was nominated as the candidate of the Northern wing of the Democracy, but, while his nomination has fallen like a wet blanket upon the ardor of the Southern Democrats, it has been coldly received at the North. The party there is in a hopeless minority, and it was expected and represented that his nomination, as the candidate of the Northern wing, would attract some additional strength to its ranks. Past experience has taught both sections to place no reliance upon the platform, and the antecedents of Buchanan warn all who know them to have no confidence in him. The North won't trust him "with the resolutions annexed," and the South is suspicious of the platform with the candidate annexed. The newspapers all over the country that have hitherto been neutral are exposing Buchanan's weakness and instability as a politician and predicting his defeat. The spoils-seeking coalition by which he was placed in nomination has failed to deceive the people, and the nomination is everywhere received with cold distrust, or with determined opposition.

☞The editor of the Democrat attempts to relieve his Connecticut orator, Mr. Gallagher, from a very small portion of the charges made against him, and says that he knows from direct information that one gentleman did return from the New York convention last week. Several persons who were in New York during the session of the National Council may have returned, but Mr. Gallagher stated that "one of the Kentucky delegates to the National Council" had told him he had left it because he was disgusted, &c. We said we did not believe the statement and now we say that no Kentucky delegate to the National Council ever made such a statement to Mr Gallagher, or to any one else. The issue is made up. Where's the proof? The editor of the Democrat confesses judgment on the other counts in the indictment against his Connecticut orator, and admits that there was not a word of truth in his story about the resolution in the National Council to lay Mr. Fillmore on the shelf.

VIRGINIA ELECTIONS.—The election at Richmond, Va., resulted in the success of P. P. Winston, the American candidate for Sheriff, by 300 majority. Marmaduke Johnson was reelected Commonwealth's Attorney, and J. M. Francisco, Edwin Burton, and G. A. Hundley were elected Commissioners of the Revenue.

The American party in Ohio county, Va., elected their candidate for Sheriff by a majority of 176 and their candidates for Commissioners of Revenue by majorities of 737 and 491 respectively. The Democrats carried their ticket at the last election.

In Lynchburg the American ticket was successful. The vote polled was 475. J. H. Cowley, American, was chosen Sheriff over R. O. Dess by 145 majority. Maj. James Garland, American, Commonwealth's Attorney; J. G. Royall, Constable.

☞Mr. Buchanan expects the American people to have as much confidence in him as in Millard Fillmore, he must be what they call in New York "a confidence man."

B. B.—One of our exchanges says this stands for Buchanan and Breckinridge, and being interpreted means that they will be "Badly Beaten."

MR. FILLMORE.—The Kingston (Penn.) Gazette, a Democratic paper, speaks of Mr. Fillmore as follows:

[illegible]

In the infancy of the American party, secrecy was necessary for the protection of its members from the persecutions of their enemies, for the protection of their persons and property from the murderous violence and insane hatred of the foreign and Roman Catholic populations, aided and incited against them by reckless native demagogues. As soon as the necessity for secrecy ceased to exist, it has been dispensed with. The opponents of the American party are very much chagrined at this. It has deprived them of more than half their capital. It has impoverished them of objections to Know Nothingism. It is a convincing proof of the rapidly increasing strength of the new party. As this party takes off the mask of secrecy and stands out boldly and openly before the world, proud of its principles and full of confidence of success, its opponents are painfully constrained to acknowledge it as an honorable and formidable competitor. It courts investigation and inquiry, and confidently challenges a single argument against any of the principles enunciated in its platform. Its opponents dare not attack them. They are conscious of their inability to find fault with them. They seek to suppress their publication among the people and resort to denunciation and misrepresentation to prevent, if possible, their adoption by the people.

☞The editor of the Democrat says that Hon. Glancy Jones, of Pennsylvania, who represents Mr. Buchanan's district in Congress, declared upon the floor of that body a few days ago that Mr. Buchanan never saw the abolition resolutions adopted in Lancaster in November, 1819, until they were in print. Mr. Glancy Jones made this statement upon some authority which has never been produced. Like the editor of the Democrat, when he demanded proof in the place where the occurrence took place, he did not suppose that a file of the Lancaster Intelligencer of 1819 would be produced containing the proceedings of this very meeting and with the name of James Buchanan appended to these same abolition resolutions. Mr. Glancy Jones has not denied that Mr. Buchanan was one of the committee who reported these resolutions. They were published with his name affixed to them in 1819 in the newspaper in the town in which Mr. Buchanan lived. They have been repeatedly republished since. It has been charged upon him that he was the author of them and although he has had frequent opportunities to do so, he has never denied the truth of this charge. That he was one of the committee by whom the resolutions were reported is established beyond a doubt and that he has never denied the imputed authorship of them is sufficient evidence, in the absence of direct proof, that he was at least cognizant of and approved and endorsed their contents.

☞The American party recently achieved a signal victory in a strong Democratic county of Alabama, and the Florence Gazette sends out the following words as follows:

[illegible]

PENNSYLVANIA.—The Key-Stone State is not entirely certain, even for "old Buck." There are many indications that Americanism is gaining ground. A correspondent of the Baltimore Democrat writes this from York, Pa:

[illegible]

A DISINTERESTED OPINION.—An Anti-American correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, in speaking upon the effect of Buchanan's nomination, says:

[illegible]

But Mr. Buchanan is our candidate, is declared to be beaten. His amiable personal qualities will go but a very short way towards reconciling the American people to the principles and policy with which he is identified. The coming contest involves too serious political issues to be influenced, to any important extent, by mere personal considerations. The vital interests of the country are at stake. We regard it as certain as any future event can be, that the continuation of such a domestic policy as that which has been inaugurated under President Pierce would ultimately produce civil war; and that the carrying out of the doctrines and sentiments of the Ostend Report and of the Cincinnati resolutions would plunge us into war with the principal powers of Europe. The great mass of the intelligent voters of the North, we have no doubt, will entertain the same conviction. Mr. Buchanan is to-day a weak candidate with the majority of the American people, and, as he becomes better understood, will rapidly grow weaker.

N. Y. Courier & Enq.

FILLMORE'S PROSPECTS.—The return of each day brings new evidence of the increasing prospects for Fillmore. His success is not a matter of doubt, but of certainty. He is stronger than he is represented. There is we admit talk of other candidates; but Fillmore will get the votes.—Boston Bee.

LONDON [illegible] 23, 1856

The [illegible] in the trial of Palmer, for the murder of Cook, charged with poisoning [illegible] by strychnine, continued and concluded yesterday. Palmer, I know, to absconment. It has now lasted eight days, and will probably last two or three more, yet every morning the avenues of the court-room in which he is tried are thronged with persons who, after spending a long time in waiting for admission, are frequently unable to obtain it, in consequence of the limited number of Winter's Hall. [illegible] Palmer's case, and remained up to the adjournment of the court. The case for the prosecution has been ably conducted, but almost too elaborately. It has given rise to an appearance of effort to prove the man guilty rather than simply to accomplish the ends of justice. The circumstantial evidence has been wide in its range and serious in its implication. And not only direct medical testimony has been brought forward, but the opinions of eminent practitioners have been submitted by the Attorney General on the part of the prosecution upon the symptoms produced by idiopathic tetanus, in order to show, according to the best experience, that the death of Cooke resulted from no such cause, but exhibited all the characteristics following and attendant upon poisoning by strychnia.

The names of such men as Sir Benjamin Brodie, Dr Swaine Taylor, Dr. Rees, all eminent in their departments of medical study, necessarily carried great weight with them, and the tenor of their statements, based on experiments and experience, was strongly to the effect that Cooke had been destroyed by strychnia. The examination and cross examination of all these witnesses was very severe, but the direct point to which the whole of their evidence tended appeared not to be in the least averted. On Wednesday Mr. Sergeant Shee opened the defense in a speech of eight hours' duration. He met the charge boldly, and started by an expression that it was his firm conviction the prisoner was innocent, that "never was a truer word uttered than when the prisoner said, 'Not guilty.'" He sought to prove absence of motive by the assertion that the death of Cooke lessened the ruin of Palmer. He sifted the evidence very closely, remarking on the point of importance upon which the prosecution laid stress, and attempted ingeniously and cleverly to explain it away. With respect to the medical testimony, he declared his intention of bringing forward equally eminent men to those who had appeared, surgeons and physicians of great name, who would entirely confute all that had been advanced by those already examined, who would, moreover, prove that, if strychnia had been administered, it could have been discovered. He concluded a speech of enormous length and great ability by securing the probability that Palmer would have poisoned his friend and then have brought a medical friend of Cooke to witness its effects—alluding to Dr. Jones, who was with Cooke when he died, sleeping in the same room with him.

Was it credible, he asked, that, if Palmer had poisoned Cooke, he would have brought Jones, who must have known the symptoms produced by the poison as well as Palmer, to be with him during the tetanic irritation of his last moments—to hear his words—to see his agonies, and observe his struggles. Had he desired to have killed him, a grain or so more of morphia in the pills would have effected the man's death, and in a quiet sleep. The learned Sergeant made a powerful appeal to the jury. He read an extract of a letter from Palmer to his wife, during which the prisoner shed tears, to show that he was not the heartless man he had been represented to be. Sergeant Shee declared his own firm conviction to be that he received was not guilty, and he concluded by saying to gentlemen of the jury, "I would not alone ask it of him, but that an aged mother, a dear sister, a fond brother, and a child were involved in it, and he called upon them to raise their minds to the capacity necessary for the occasion, and to influence their power to the country with a firm and unbiased verdict." The speech of the learned Sergeant elicited an expression of applause, which was strongly suppressed. Yesterday, for the defense, Dr. Herapath, the greatly celebrated analytical chemist, of Bristol, was examined. He stated positively that the presence of strychnine could always be detected, and gave as an important proof that if he put 10 grains into 70,000 grains of water he could detect its presence in a tenth part of a grain of that water, but the effect of his evidence was less to prove the absence of strychnia in the contents of Cooke's stomach than that he could have settled the fact if the examination had been submitted to him.

Dr. Letheby, Dr. Nunneley, Prof. Rogers and Dr. Gay were examined, but though the evidence was important and based on large experience it was hardly of the character to be adduced, for it failed materially to shake that already given. Nay, in one or two instances, confirmed it. Mr. Sergeant Shee last night stated he should conclude the defense to day. There will then be the reply by the Attorney General, and the summing up of the judges. Both are expected to be of considerable length, and it is therefore probable that the verdict will not be given until Tuesday next, if it is reached by that time.

The trial is the only topic discussed just now go where you will, meet whom you may, it alone is introduced, and, after having been penned up for many hours in the stifling atmosphere of a badly ventilated and over-crowded court-room, in itself sufficiently exhausting, the subject becomes painfully troublesome. The impression so [illegible] and [illegible] that Palmer is guilty, that the jury will find him so, and that he will be hanged. There are rumors that he has accepted a bet of $4,000 to $0 that he will be present at the ensuing Derby. If this be true, I believe the odds [illegible] further it is doubtful whether the trial—unless the close, as is sometimes the case in these important investigations, should be nearer than is apprehended—will be concluded before that great sporting event is over. Should he escape this trial he will have to—and that for the murder of his wife. The circumstances connected with the insurances look very dark. If he is guiltless, the deaths of the persons insured by him at the very time he most needed the large sums for which their lives were covered is a coincidence of a very remarkable kind.

Dublin Gazette.

BREACH OF PROMISE.—Yesterday, in the court of common pleas, a verdict was rendered in the case of Charlotte Riley vs. Anthony Keary, of $5,000 for plaintiff. The facts, as we learn them, are these: Keary was once injured by the cars of the C. C. and C. Railroad Company, and the girl Charlotte used him kindly, and finally coming up between them an understanding of marriage her when he should obtain a verdict against the railroad company, which he did, but, his relations became more intimate than the law allows. The suit against the company was $8,000. Keary, after obtaining the verdict, left and decamped to Ireland, leaving Charlotte and their child in the lurch. She brought suit for breach of promise, &c., and attached the balance yet due him from the railroad company, and, as we have heard, gained a verdict to the tune of $5,000. She will have, soon, we are informed, for Ireland, with the record of judgment, and pursue him in law there, if he does not comply with her just demand without.—Cleveland Herald, 10th.

THE DEMOCRATIC NOMINATION.—The impression made upon the public mind by the nomination of Mr. Jas. Buchanan for the Presidency is not at all what his friends had counted upon. Many who have been his friends thought him a good available man, but they believe that he is one quite easy to be beaten, if the opposition to his party which is known to exist can be properly organized. Even the North American, which for a time tried to prepare the public mind for such a nomination as the fittest that could be made, has, under the discipline of some kind of schooling that has evidently made an impression, changed its tone completely. The New York Herald, too, which has been suspected strongly of a preference for Mr. Buchanan, changes its tone to-day.—Phila. Bul.

"Ma, didn't the minister say last Sunday that the sparks flew upwards?" "Yes, my dear, how came you to be thinking of it?" "Because, yesterday, I saw cousin Sally's spark staggering along the street and falling downwards!" "Here, Bridget, put this child to bed; she must be sleepy."

QUEER INCIDENT.—A Wild Man.—As some gentlemen of this city were riding in the neighborhood of Oakland yesterday, they saw, in the field, near the road, what appeared to be a man entirely naked. They left the vehicle, and made chase. The naked object made tracks for the woods, a dense one, and caught after a hard run. It turned out to be a man perfectly wild, entirely naked, and as much like the wild man of the woods as possible. On taking him to the house, one of the party attempted to draw over the captive's mother [illegible] a pair of old pantaloons that had been procured for the purpose. But he resisted with his utmost desperation, and, taking advantage of a momentary negligence of his keepers, [illegible] for the woods. [illegible] result of the second chase was, I should [illegible] on the part of the "specie" who succeeded in partially clothing their master, and his good friends then took him where he can be investigated.

HAMMONTON, N. J., April 2.

I was attacked by a severe pain in the inside, in the region of my liver. I suffered intense pain. I took the usual winter remedies, but all to no purpose. At length I was advised to take a decoction of wild cherry bark. I did so, and in a few days found myself entirely relieved. I have since used it in my family, and have found it a never failing remedy for colds, coughs, and all diseases of the throat and lungs. I have also used it in cases of chronic rheumatism, and have found it a most valuable remedy for that complaint. SATURDAY, JUNE 14 A. M.

THE THEATER.—BENEFIT OF GEO. MELLUS, ESQ.—To-night will be the last of our theatrical season. It has been set apart for a complimentary benefit tendered to the manager by the ladies and gentlemen of the company and the attaches of the theater.

During Mr. Mellus's management of our theater he has spared no pains in catering to the public taste. He has made the theater a delightful place of resort and has been indefatigable in seeking to gratify the patrons of his elegant little temple of thespis. His efforts to revive a pure dramatic taste in our city have not been unavailing, but they have not been as entirely successful as they deserved. For a long time previous to Mr. Mellus's management theatricals in Louisville were much depressed, but by judicious fostering a healthy tone of feeling has been restored and a promise has been given that a good manager, good company, and a succession of really brilliant stars will hereafter be well sustained.

The compliment to Mr. Mellus is well deserved and we anticipate an overflowing house to grace the closing of the season.

An attractive bill is presented for the night; Ingomar and the farce of Perfection, together with an exhibition of Herr Cline's wonderful feats upon the tight-rope. The charming Miss Gladstane will appear as Parthenia and Kate O'Brien.

Mr. E. L. Tilton, a great favorite with our citizens, has consented to appear upon this occasion and will sustain the part of Ingomar.

FIRE.—There was an alarm of fire at the Galt House yesterday forenoon, which caused a stampede among the inmates. It originated from sparks settling on the ridge of the roof, and was extinguished in a few minutes with very trifling damage. An hour afterwards every trace of smoke had disappeared and all was "calm as a summer's morning." An hour or two after, workmen were covering the exposed portions of the roof with tin, so as to prevent the possibility of a recurrence of the accident.

☞ We are indebted to Mr. Brooks for a basket of delicious strawberries. The finest fruit that our market has been supplied with is brought from the farm of Mr. Brooks, near the city. He has a choice selection of all descriptions of elegant fruit, carefully tended, and always the first in market.

☞ The fire about half past 1 o'clock yesterday was in Jefferson ville. The old penitentiary warehouse burned down. The building was not occupied.

☞ In the report of the city court the examination and committal of one Hawkins is mentioned on a charge of stealing a gun. Hawkins had a partner, but he made good his escape. Officer Seay caught him this morning. He gives his name as Higgins, with several aliases.

BEDBUGS, MOTHS, ANTS, AND ROACHES.—Messrs. Raymond & Patten request us to say they have just received a preparation (without poison) which will destroy all sorts of vermin in the shortest possible time. Price 25 cents.

☞ The attention of our readers is called to the advertisement of Farm, Crops, &c., to be sold at auction on Monday, the 16th, adjoining Jeffersontown or Buinerstown in this county. This sale will afford an excellent opportunity for those who wish to buy a desirable country residence or to make a profitable investment in farming lands.

☞ Messrs. S. G. Henry & Co. have a special sale this morning, Saturday, at 11 o'clock, on the wharf at Portland, of 38 casks sides, shoulders, and hams, saved from the wreck of the steamer David White, and sold by order of underwriters.

☞ Mr. T. G Lloyd will deliver a temperance address at the Mozart Hall to-morrow (Sunday) evening at 3 o'clock. The ladies and gentlemen of the city are invited to attend.

PHILOSOPHY AND PRACTICE OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION, ILLUSTRATED FROM THE NARRATIVE OF THE CHILDHOOD OF JESUS.—The third of the series of instructive discourses on this subject will be delivered by the Pastor of the Walnut Street Baptist Church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. In this discourse will be considered the christian view of physical culture—its importance and relation to social, moral, and religious improvement.

☞ The steamship Grenada left New Orleans on the 7th for San Juan and Aspinwall with a large number of passengers. Among them were Col. Jack Allen, J. C. Parsons, Worder Pope, C. Buchanan, W. B. Hite, J. G P. Howe, and others of this city.

ADMITTED TO BAIL.—Ben. Johnson, who has been in jail over twenty months on a charge of having killed Ben. Lawrence, gave bail yesterday in $2,000 for his appearance at the next term of the criminal court, and was set at liberty.

☞ The stock of pork at New Orleans on the 1st inst., was 5,789 bbls., of which 2,459 bbls were mess and 3,137 bbls uninspected.

☞ Mr. C. C. Spencer requests us to call attention to his sale of fine household and kitchen furniture this morning at 10 o'clock, at the private residence on Sixth street, between Grayson and Walnut, and opposite St. Paul's Church. The ladies are specially invited to attend. The furniture is just such as is wanted by those who intend to commence house-keeping.

LAST DAY OF THE FAIR.—Sweepstakes' premiums for all classes of animals which had taken premiums on previous days—none others admitted to the ring.

First Ring—Stallions of all ages—12 Entries.

Solomon Lowe, of Fayette, premium $20 on bay colt, two years old.

Grundy & Co., of Washington, certificate on bay, five years old.

Second Ring—Geldings—14 Entries.

Logan Ridley, of Woodford, premium $20, pair match bays, in harness.

J. C. Hall, of Jefferson, certificate, pair match bays, in harness.

Third Ring—Mares—18 Entries.

Henry C. Duncan, of Nelson, premium $20, sorrel colt, one year old.

D. W. Morris, of Jefferson, certificate, pair match bays, in harness.

Thus closed the first exhibition of horses at the fair grounds, and we but echo the sentiment of all, embracing strangers from all parts of the State and such of our citizens as have been daily on the grounds, that has been a series of exhibitions unsurpassed in interest, and with which all have been satisfied. It has inaugurated a new feature in the original object of the association, which we trust may prove of still greater interest on all future occasions of the kind.

After the recess for dinner the sale of animals commenced, C. C. Spencer, auctioneer. A large number of animals were entered for sale. As the complete list of sales will be furnished by Mr. S., we only state that the premium pony brought $200 and the famous draft stallion from Canada, owned by J. C. Waltz, brought $1460.

THE JULIEN MINSTRELS.—This is indeed one of the very best bands of negro minstrels that has ever visited this city. They are educated musicians and vocalists. The solos are executed with great taste and accuracy, while their choruses are full of harmony. Their dialogues and burlesques are original, and, while they abound in wit and humor, are chaste. We recommend them to the patronage of the lovers of music and mirth. They perform to-night at Mozart Hall.

☞ The Eastern mail was received at the postoffice about 9 o'clock last night. We are much obliged to the clerks for putting up some of our exchanges at that hour. But unfortunately the New York papers, which were the most desirable, were not opened, but in place of them some unimportant ones.

INDIANA.—Ballard Smith, Esq., formerly of this city, has been nominated as the Sag-Nicht candidate for Representative to the Legislature from Perry county. The Sag-Nichts convention which met at Indianapolis on Thursday, nominated James M. Gregg for Congress on the 50th ballot.

James Hughes, of Monroe, is the Sag-Nicht candidate for Congress in the third district.

☞ If any of our readers have not been to the Floral Festival now being held in Mechanic's Institute, they had better be in haste to visit it as we understand it is to close to-night. None should omit this opportunity to see one of the finest exhibitions of taste and beauty that we have had in our city for a long time. The festival to-night will have great attractions. Schneider's celebrated Sax-Horn band is to give a benefit to the ladies engaged in that good work. From the great reputation of these musicians we anticipate a rich musical treat. Additions have also been made to the floral department. If the number increases in the same proportion as it has done from the commencement of this festival, we expect to see the hall of the Institute crowded to-night to overflowing.

RIVER AND STEAMBOAT MATTERS

The river is falling slowly. Last evening there were 5 feet 7 inches water in the canal. No rain yet. The crops are suffering seriously from drought.

For Cairo and St. Louis—The packet Fashion leaves for St. Louis this morning. She is a capital boat and has excellent officers. We are indebted to Messrs. Clark and Smith, her attentive officers, for favors. She reports 32 feet at Smithland and the tow-hee lying aground in the channel.

The Bay City also leaves for St. Louis today.

The new and very light-draught steamer Arkansas Traveler leaves for Cairo and Memphis to-day, and the Pelican leaves for New Orleans.

The Moses McLellan is the mailboat for Circumstantia to-day, the Emma Dean is the Carrollton packet, and the Dove is the Kentucky river packet.

Another Steamer Sunk—The sternwheel steamer Umpire No 3, bound from Cincinnati to Little Rock, was sunk at Flourche Bar, in Arkansas river, on the 1st inst., eight miles below Little Rock. Her stern lies in eight feet water, and the boat is reported a total loss. Her cargo consisted principally of whisky, iron, furniture, &c., for Little Rock. She had recently been cleaned and thoroughly repaired, and is owned by Capt. Jenks Brown and Mr. Pinewan, of Arkansas. She was not insured.

The steamer Thomas Swann and Baltimore, which were sold by auction on Wednesday for $230,000, were resold yesterday to the Keokuk Packet Company for $31,750. The Baltimore brought an advance of $1,100 and the Thomas Swann an advance of $1,000. The Baltimore is to run from St. Louis to Keokuk and the Thomas Swann from St. Louis to Alton.

The steamer Fanny Bullit passed Vicksburg on Thursday on her upward trip.

The Pelican repairs the Chancellor and Otto aground at Cottonwood, and the Rainbow at Smithtown.

ACCIDENT ON THE JEFFERSONVILLE RAILROAD.—Last evening's train was detained by the breaking of an axle. It got in about nine o'clock.

☞ The weekly exhibition of the Horticultural Society will take place at the Mozart Hall at 11 o'clock this morning.

MURDER.—We learn, says the Canton (Miss.) Citizen, that Jamie M. Peak, overseer of Major Wm Mosby, was murdered a few days ago by Dave, one of the slaves on the place, by knocking him on the head with a club.

☞ Mr. C. Spencer, the marshal of the Southwestern Agricultural and Mechanical Association, has furnished us with the sales of stock at auction made by him and his associates on yesterday afternoon, as follows:

Jonathan stallion,	$1,460
Kentucky mare,		$500
Kentucky mare,		500
